

Preventing corruption

Babra Dondo coordinates Mobility for Africa's Chipinge site. Her work supports the company's delivery of electric mobility solutions in Zimbabwe. InfraCo Africa delivered Business Integrity training to Mobility for Africa's team in 2023.

Babra has a background in Human Resources and joined Mobility for Africa in September 2022. She is responsible for site administration and monitoring the Chipinge battery swap technicians. She also supports the company's research team to gather data required to inform the development of new sites.

Babra is passionate about Mobility for Africa's work to deliver electric three-wheeler 'Hambas' and solar-powered battery charging in rural Zimbabwe. "The project will change the lives of people here in Chipinge. It predominantly targets women, who are the pillar of this society. Access to clean transport will improve the livelihoods of families and give them stability, while positively impacting all aspects of their lives."

InfraCo Africa works closely with its project partners to embed high standards of business integrity. Babra attended a recent training session on business integrity. "From InfraCo Africa's training I learned about different laws relating to corruption in Zimbabwe.

As a result of today's training, I am now better informed and will stay away from those issues that create an issue of corruption."

She concluded, "I will educate my colleagues on the things that I have learnt and encourage them to prevent corruption in their personal lives and at the workplace."

Looking to the future, Babra is ambitious to progress her career with Mobility for Africa. "This project has had a positive impact on my professional and personal life. It has been a good learning experience and I continue to learn new things. My future plans involve moving up the ranks of the company and I hope that the project will expand across the Southern Africa region."
